

One-day-old Eggs Save them with Knickerbocker Ice

Many invalids and delicate children depend upon these eggs, direct from the farm. The eggs sell at from $1.35 to $1.45 a dozen. To keep them with one-day-old freshness—the "egg-man" says: "Put the box in the refrigerator—turn the eggs frequently." All eggs should be kept in the refrigerator—outside temperature is too variable. You don't need as much Knickerbocker ice in winter as you do in summer, but for health's sake you need it just as vitally. Your refrigerator doesn't only keep food cold, but pure and fresh.

PALMER OPENS BIG GOUGERS' QUEST IN BUILDING TRADES

Attorney-General Gives Unlimited Powers to Rand and Kresel.

STARTS IN NEW YORK

Special Federal Grand Jury to Hear Charges Against Contractors.

BRINDELL STILL UNTRIED

Labor Union Not on Trial,
Says Justice Who Stops
Abusing of Law.

Full authority for a nationwide investigation of the building trades situation has been vested by Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer in William Rand and Isidore J. Kresel, who were appointed on Tuesday to undertake a Federal inquiry along the lines that have been followed by the Lockwood legislative committee in its sensational public hearings here.

The Federal investigation, it was announced yesterday, will supersede immediately the building trades inquiry which was started under the supervision of United States Attorney Francis G. Caffey, and which has resulted to date in filing of indictments against fifteen individuals and corporations.

The inquiry is expected to open in this city, but ultimately to stretch across the continent, and it was said that in all probability it will continue for at least a year, because of the vastness of the proposition to be tackled. The first step will be to summon a special Federal Grand Jury in this district to hear evidence against alleged unlawful combinations.

As a means of laying foundation for the fullest cooperation between the Federal and State investigators of the building trades, Mr. Kresel conferred last night with Samuel Untermyer, chief counsel to the Lockwood committee, who is known to be heartily in favor of the Federal move.

Scope of Inquiry Is Broad.

At the offices of Jerome Rand & Kresel, 37 Wall street, of which firm both Mr. Rand and Mr. Kresel are members, they issued a formal statement which said:

"We have accepted designations from the Attorney-General to represent him in the conduct of such investigations, prosecutions and dissolution suits as may be appropriate to violations of the Sherman law by persons and corporations connected with the building business as manufacturers, agents and dealers in material.

"He has placed at our disposal all of the facilities of the Department of Justice and has promised such additional assistance as in our judgment the progress of our work may require. The scope of our authority is nationwide, and our instructions are to get at the facts and punish or remedy violations of the law wherever and by whomsoever committed.

"We have no reason to doubt that we shall receive the cordial cooperation of the gentlemen conducting the building trades inquiry before the Lockwood committee and the criminal proceedings in this State and county. We shall in turn be glad to render them any assistance in our power."

Persons connected with the housing inquiry expressed the opinion yesterday that the passing of Attorney-General Palmer with the retiring Democratic Administration would have no effect upon the work to which Mr. Rand and Mr. Kresel have been assigned, because investigations begun prior to a change of administration invariably are continued by the succeeding Attorney-General.

The investigation conducted by the local United States Attorney's office has been limited to the Southern District of New York, and no pretence has been made that it was intended to get after offenders outside of this district.

Argument upon Robert P. Brindell's appeal from an order denying his application for a change of venue terminated yesterday afternoon with the announcement by Presiding Justice John Proctor Clarke of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court that a decision would be handed down to-day.

The hearing, which was one of a number of legal fights waged on behalf of the "Car" of the building trades unions to delay his trial on the indictments which charge him with having taken bribes to call off strikes on big building jobs, was marked by a brief collision between Martin W. Littleton, Brindell's attorney, and the court.

This occurred when Mr. Littleton argued that his client could not obtain a fair trial from a special panel of jurors which had been summoned to sit in his case. He declared that special panels were invariably composed of bankers, prosperous business men and others "not in sympathy with union labor."

Justice Clarke stopped him, stating that he would not permit the judicial system to be assailed.

"But your Honor has not heard me through," Mr. Littleton protested. "I stopped you on the threshold," replied Justice Clarke, "for when you protest against judicial procedure which the court knows to be conducted in the interests of absolute fairness and without favoritism the court should express itself definitely."

When Mr. Littleton argued that Brindell should not be tried in New York county because the articles published about him in the newspapers had inflamed the public against him, Justice Walter Lloyd Smith, who comes from up-State, remarked: "In out of town districts the New York papers are being more and more widely circulated all the time and they are often more carefully read in such districts than in the city, because when one reader is finished with one he passes it to some one else, and in that way they are passed around to everybody."

Labor Unions Not on Trial.

Justice Victor J. Dowling said in regard to Mr. Littleton's remarks about labor unions: "Organized labor is not on trial. I should think that if a man is accused of an act inimical to organized labor he might face better through having a jury composed of persons other than labor representatives."

Mr. Untermyer, who appeared with his son-in-law, Stanley Richter, to oppose the appeal on behalf of the Lockwood committee, said that New York county with its cosmopolitan population offered as good a place as any for a fair trial and that if Brindell's case were sent out of the county, then every case of public interest should be tried elsewhere.

He told the five justices that many of the affidavits submitted on behalf of Brindell voiced the views of denizens of a Hell's Kitchen rendezvous.

"It is almost an insult to the court to present a mass of this sort of stuff to it," he said.

In event of the Appellate Division upholding the decision of Supreme Court Justice Burr, who denied the change of venue, the trial of Brindell probably will begin on Monday.

Justice John V. McAvoy, in the Supreme Court, denied a motion made yesterday on behalf of Milton Schnaier and Morris Jarcho, two indicted master plumbers, for a dismissal of the charges hanging over them. Their attorney had contended that their testimony before the Lockwood committee gave immunity to them, but Justice McAvoy held otherwise.

A motion for inspection of the minutes of the Grand Jury which indicted fifty-two members of John T. Hetrick's plumbing combine for violation of the State anti-trust laws was argued, but decision was reserved.

Matters in the administration of the New York Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church which have arisen since the death of Bishop Charles Sumner Burch were considered yesterday at a meeting of the standing committee of the diocese at the office of George Zabriskie, 49 Wall street.

MAYOR IS BAFFLED IN COAL PRICE HUNT

Dealers Tell Hylan That Profits Charged Are Not Too Big.

NO REAL COAL SHORTAGE

Net Result Is Executive Deplores Misquoting of His Remarks.

Mayor Hylan called coal dealers before the Board of Estimate yesterday in an effort to find whether there is a combine among coal men to keep the price up, bid collusively or otherwise connive to get more of the city's money for coal than they are entitled to. He found that the dealers belong to various associations, but was unable to show that there was anything wrong with such membership or the manner in which dealers did business.

The Mayor's investigation was ordered when he was informed that the city is paying more for coal on contract than it could buy the coal for in the open market. The net result of the day's examination revealed the fact that the city buys coal by the long, or 2,300 pound ton, instead of the short, or 2,000 pound ton. In order that the discrepancy between the ton price the city pays and the ton price the public pays might not appear so great, the Mayor introduced and had adopted a resolution instructing all city departments hereafter to buy coal by the short ton.

"Some writer with sick pen might make a good deal out of that difference," the Mayor commented. Through Thomas F. Farrell of William F. Farrell & Co., Joseph Bacon of the Bacon Coal Company and William J. Dalton of the Wyoming Coal Company the Mayor sought to show that the coal companies employ press agents to obtain publication of stories of impending coal shortages for the purpose of boosting the price of coal. The witnesses made denial of that and also that coal is shipped to Canada preferentially to produce a shortage here. It was explained that coal was moved to Canada in large bulk at certain seasons because the commodity had to be shipped before ice closes the lakes.

The Mayor asked Mr. Bacon whether the coal investigation in Brooklyn several years ago did any good, and Mr. Bacon replied that he did not think so. The Mayor and Mr. Dalton consoled each other when Dalton said he had been misquoted by a newspaper.

LIVINGSTON AND WIFE PARTED, SUIT SHOWS

Lawyer in Paris, Where He Will Make Home.

The fact that Cambridge Livingston, a lawyer, has for sixteen months been living apart from his wife, Mrs. Alice Livingston, was made known yesterday in the Supreme Court through an action brought by her.

Mr. Livingston is a graduate of Harvard, class of '90, and a member of the Knickerbocker Club. He was formerly connected with the law office of Joseph H. Choate. He served as Third Deputy Police Commissioner, under former Police Commissioner Bugher. At present he is in Paris, where he intends to remain and open a law office.

His wife was formerly Mrs. Cyrus Field Judson. She is now living in 31 East Fifty-third street with the three children of her first marriage. Since her separation from Mr. Livingston he has sent her $200 a month, in accordance with their agreement that this sum was acceptable in lieu of all claims. Mrs. Livingston is now suing for $400, claiming this sum is due for the November and December allowances under the agreement with her husband.

DRUG PEDLER'S STOCK IN A BABY CARRIAGE

Police Charge Man Also With Using Children as Agents.

Carrying his stock in trade concealed under the pillows of a baby carriage and using school children as go-betweens from himself to his customers in East Harlem are two counts mentioned by the police against Vincent Bisalio, aged 25, of 232 East 125th street. He was locked in Police Headquarters yesterday on a charge of violating the Federal narcotic law. According to the police, he is a drug pedler for whom they have been looking several months.

Detectives Hackett and Boylan of the narcotic squad noticed Bisalio yesterday in front of Public School No. 83, 234 East 109th street, handing out small packages to children as they came out for the afternoon. He recognized the detectives and started to run. They fired six times at the fleeing man and chased him several blocks before making the arrest. On taking Bisalio back to the schoolhouse, the detectives said, they found in a hallway opposite the school a baby carriage he had left and under its pillows $500 worth of heroin and morphine in small packages.

Important Changes in the new New York City Telephone Directory

WHEN you receive the 1920 Fall issue of the New York City Telephone Directory you will notice a number of important changes in its make-up.

The first three letters of all central office names (except those in Staten Island) have been capitalized in HEAVY GOTHIC TYPE and separated by a small space from the other letters of the designation.

Numbers which formerly were below 1000 have been changed by prefixing enough zeros to make them four digit numbers. For example, "Wadsworth 19" has been changed to "WAD swth-0019."

Reasons For These Changes

These changes have been made in preparation for the installation of the new machine switching apparatus in certain exchange areas in New York City. The new system probably will be in service in these areas sometime next Summer.

The subscribers affected will be provided with new telephone instruments equipped with dials which they will use to make all local telephone calls without the aid of an operator. They will dial the first three letters of the central office name and a number with at least four numerals. To make it easy for these subscribers to tell at a glance just what letters to dial the set-up of the Fall issue of the directory has been changed to make the first three letters of the central office names stand out clearly from the rest of the designation.

Numbers below 1000 have been built up to meet the requirement that at least four numerals in addition to the three capitalized letters must be dialed.

How The Changes Will Affect You

The capitalization of the first three letters will make no difference in the pronunciation of the central office name. Manual subscribers should continue to pronounce central office names in full when asking the operator for a number. For example, WAD swth should be pronounced "Wadsworth" as heretofore.

Where zeros are introduced, they will form part of the number and should be pronounced by manual subscribers in asking the operator for a number, not as "zero" but as "oh." Example, "WAD swth-0019" will be pronounced "Wadsworth oh-oh-one-nine."

In giving such numbers to an operator or to another person all subscribers should include the initial zeros as part of the number.

Machine Switching Subscribers will receive full instructions in the use of the new system before it is placed in service.
